

Sustainable Garden Design Perth

Working with a palette of native flora, edible plants and sculptural, exotic species, Sustainable Garden Design both inspires and delights every sense.

For those who are inspired by natural elements and are searching for original and interesting, tailored designs, look no further.

Sustainable Garden Design Perth has been designing and installing sustainable, natural gardens for seven years, complementing them with warm natural materials such as stone, weathered metal, aged wood, as well as recycled objects and handmade textures.

The company's aim, where possible, is to minimise the impact gardens have on the delicate environment, and to design them to thrive in Perth's unique coastal climate.

Clients who wish to reconnect with their garden spaces after renovations, or to install new gardens after building, find Sustainable Garden Design's personal approach to each project a refreshing element.

In 2012, the company's Shenton Park garden was recognised in the City of Subiaco annual Sustainable Garden Awards. Its garden designs have also recently featured in The West Habitat magazine, The Sunday Times Home magazine, and in the Australia-wide publication Australian Garden Design.

COTTESLOE

Influenced by a mixture of mid-century design aesthetics and the use of sustainable principles, this garden makes practical use of minimal space.

The owners of the home wanted a garden that would require minimal maintenance and provide them with adequate interesting spaces for frequent entertainment. They also requested a small kitchen garden with herbs, as well as citrus and olive trees, and artistic elements in both the private and public spaces within the garden.

There was to be a cohesive use of the key elements and textures throughout, with the spaces designed to be useable in all seasons. The strategic placement of a deciduous tree in the rear courtyard provides additional greenery, while a louvred pergola allows precious winter light to penetrate throughout the house and garden. Beautiful hand-textured, curved raised garden beds serve as a place to sit as well as being filled with delicious herbs and Tahitian lime, lemon and orange trees, all just a few steps from the kitchen door. All of these components have combined to create a thoughtful balance of practicality and aesthetics within this garden.
